

North Carolina State Parks

A guide to the areas set aside and maintained as State Parks for the enjoyment of North Carolina's citizens and their guests — containing general information about the State Parks as a whole and brief word-and-picture descriptions of each.

YOUR STATE PARKS

THE STATE PARKS described in this booklet are the result of planning and development over a number of years.

Endowed by nature with ideal sites that range from the shores of the Atlantic Ocean to the tops of the Blue Ridge Mountains, the State has located its State Parks for easy access as well as for varied appeal. They offer a choice of homelike convenience and comfort in sturdy, modern facilities . . . the hardy outdoor life of tenting and camp cooking . . . or the quick-and-easy freedom of a day's picknicking. The State Parks offer excellent opportunities for economical vacations—either in the modern, fully equipped vacation cabins or in the campgrounds.

We sincerely believe that North Carolina's well planned, well located, well equipped and well maintained State Parks are a matter of justifiable pride in which every citizen has a share. This is earned by your cooperation in observing the lenient rules and leaving the facilities and grounds clean and orderly.

Keep this guide book for handy reference—use your State Parks year 'round for healthful recreation and relaxation!

It includes 365 acres and lies on both sides of the Neuse River. The most striking natural feature is the cliffs, rising ninety feet above the Neuse River. Bobwhite and numerous songbirds frequent the park, and the common mammals include cottontail rabbit, raccoon, fox and gray squirrel, opossum and muskrat.

S. 70 at the western edge of Morehead City. Mailing Address: Fort Macon State Park, P. O. Box 127, Atlantic Beach, North Carolina. Telephone: Morehead City Park 6-3775.

DESCRIPTION

Fort Macon State Park, bounded by the Atlantic Ocean on the south and Bogue Sound on the north, is on the barrier beach of Bogue Island and extends some two miles westward from Beaufort Inlet. Within the park is historic Fort Macon, a hundred-year-old masterpiece of architectural beauty, seized by the Confederate forces in April 1861, and captured by the Union forces on April 26, 1862. Since early Colonial days, the location of the present fort has been the site of fortifications for the protection of Beaufort Inlet.

No less interesting is the natural beauty of Fort Macon State Park. The high dunes, covered with the waving plumes of sea oats, old cedars picturesquely shorn by the wind and salt spray, live oaks, red-berried yaupon, the green marshes along the sound, the ceaseless breaking of the ocean on the beach, are all a part of a coastal area of unusually high scenic values.

The park is populated by a host of seashore birds, including gulls, terns, sandpipers and the like.

Fort Macon, established in 1924 by transfer from the Federal government, was the second North Carolina State Park to be acquired. It was established and is maintained for the three-fold purpose of protecting and preserving outstanding natural and scenic values, protecting and preserving Fort Macon, and providing recreational use of natural resources.

Accessible over paved roads from North Carolina highways 89 and 66. Mailing Address: Hanging Rock State Park, P. O. Box 126, Danbury, North Carolina. Telephone: Danbury LYnnhurst 3-7174.

DESCRIPTION

Located in the Sauratown Mountains, one of the most easterly mountainous areas in the State, Hanging Rock State Park offers a variety of features, both natural and man-made, that afford interest and pleasure. Here is natural beauty in profusion. Rugged mountain terrain, clear sparkling mountain streams, waterfalls and cascades, a cool inviting lake nestled in the hills, extensive growths of mountain laurel, rhododendron, stewartia, and other flowering shrubs, beautiful interior and distant views—all these await the visitor.

Included in the 3,865 acres of Hanging Rock State Park are Hanging Rock and Moore's Knob. From Moore's Knob, elevation 2,572 feet, one may look across the valley of the Dan River, with its patchwork of tobacco fields, to the Blue Ridge Mountains of North Carolina and Virginia. From Hanging Rock, miles of the upper portion of the Piedmont Plateau are spread out before the eye.

Hanging Rock State Park lies on the Piedmont Plateau, an ancient erosion surface underlain by highly altered rocks. Most of the rocks were originally sandstone, but, under conditions of great heat and pressure, they were changed to massive quartzites and foliated rocks, such as quartz schist and quartz mica schist. Hanging Rock, Cook's Wall and Moore's Knob owe their greater height to the fact that they are composed of quartzite—a type of rock with superior resistance to erosion. Under the combined action of heat and cold and water, the softer rocks have been eroded, leaving the quartzite to form peaks. Also interesting geologically is a rare and peculiar variety of sandstone, itacolumite, known locally as flexible sandstone, which is flexible and may be easily bent.

The wealth of plant life at Hanging Rock State Park is particularly interesting, not only to the botanist but, because of the beauty of flower and form of many of the species, to the layman as well. Over three hundred species of plants typical of the Piedmont and of the lower mountain ranges are represented, some of them quite uncommon. Common mammals include gray squirrel, opossum and raccoon.

DESCRIPTION

Jones Lake State Park covers 2,000 acres and is maintained and operated exclusively for Negro use. The area contains typical Coastal Plain forest landscape and good examples of pocosins, which are upland shrub bogs peculiar to the eastern parts of the Carolinas and Georgia. Jones Lake, one of the natural lakes said to have been formed by the impact of meteorites on the earth's surface, has an area of 224 acres and is the most important natural feature. With its placid surface and cypress bordered shores, it forms a beautiful landscape picture.

The park contains a great variety of trees and shrubs. The most conspicuous tree is the stately long leaf pine with its distinctive long needles. Other trees include loblolly pine, pond pine which grows in the pocosins, juniper (white cedar), black gum, American holly and turkey oak. Distinctive shrubs include the loblolly or bull bay with its beautiful white flowers, wax myrtle, gallberry and fetter bush with flowers like those of the lily-of-the-valley.

MORROW MOUNTAIN FROM THE PEE DEE RIVER

LOCATION

Stanly County, seven miles east of Albemarle. Accessible over paved roads from North Carolina Highways 27, 73 and 740. Mailing Address: Morrow Mountain State Park, Route 2, Albemarle, North Carolina. Telephone: Albemarle YUkon 2-4402.

DESCRIPTION

Covering 4,135 acres in the Uwharrie Mountains on the banks of the Pee Dee River, Morrow Mountain State Park is one of the outstanding scenic attractions of the Piedmont.

ONE OF THE VACATION CABINS

Its decidedly mountainous appearance is accentuated by the sharp differences in elevation between the hills and the surrounding country-side, and is emphasized by the heavy growths of mountain laurel in the stream valleys and on the hillsides.

From Morrow Mountain, Tater Top, Attaiway, Sugar Loaf, and other hill tops, there are wonderful panoramic views that extend for miles. The broad expanse of the Pee Dee River flowing placidly along the eastern boundary of the park, the hills ranging to the north and east, the rolling farm lands dotted with grain fields and stretching westward from the hills, are parts of the picture that greets the eye—a picture which is full of the beauty of nature at any season. In the spring, the fresh new green of the pines and the white of the dogwood bloom on the hillsides herald the new season. In the fall, the hills are clothed with the flaming beauty of autumn foliage.

Morrow Mountain State Park is part of an area most interesting geologically. The Uwharrie Mountains, which form a part of what remains of the Ocoee Mountains, are a portion of the oldest mountain range in America—far older than the mountains of the Appalachian System.

Within the park is a great variety of plant life. Dogwood, redbud, red cedar, American holly, oaks, maples, pines are but a few of the larger species under which grow many kinds of shrubs and herbaceous plants. Plant associations of both the woods and the open fields are present.

Deer, gray squirrel, raccoon and opossum are among the most frequently seen mammals. Turkey, quail, and many species of songbirds inhabit the park.

SLOPES OF MOUNT JEFFERSON

DESCRIPTION

Mount Jefferson State Park covers 464 acres and includes the peak and slopes of Mount Jefferson. Fine panoramic views of the country for miles around may be seen from various points within the park.

Mount Jefferson is a steep-sided northwesterly trending mountain that rises abruptly for more than 1600 feet above the surrounding terrain. It lies along the drainage divide of North Fork and South Fork of New River, and these drainage systems had important influences on the size and shape of the mountain. This and other high mountains in the area are but remnants of a broad high plateau that existed throughout much of Western North Carolina in past geologic times but which has been greatly dissected as a result of the weathering of the underlying rocks and their removal by stream action and other erosive forces. Mount Jefferson has formed as a result of the resistance of the underlying rocks to these erosive forces.

MOUNT JEFFERSON OVERLOOK

The park includes a wide variety of forest trees, shrubs and flowers. At the lower elevations, sugar maple, red maple, black locust, ash, hickory, tulip poplar, birch, basswood, chestnut oak, white oak and the various red oaks are found. The upper elevations are almost completely occupied by chestnut oak with a heavy undergrowth of purple rhododendron and mountain laurel. From June 10 until July 1, the mountain is particularly attractive with this profusion of flowering shrubbery. Other flowering trees and shrubs are service berry, bush honeysuckle, azalea and dogwood. Wild iris, jack-in-the-pulpit, violets, galax, mosses, ferns and huckleberries are plants of interest that can be found in the park.

DESCRIPTION

Mount Mitchell State Park is truly in "the land of the sky"—no place in the park is less than a mile high. The dominant feature is Mount Mitchell, the highest peak in Eastern United States, towering 6,684 feet above sea level. The views from Mount Mitchell, and from other parts of the park, are among the most beautiful and magnificent in the Southern Appalachians. Protected within the park are several hundred acres of virgin balsam and spruce forest.

The plant life of Mount Mitchell State Park, like the climate, is more that of Canada than Carolina. The forests are almost pure balsam and red spruce stands, but some yellow birch, paper birch, fire cherry and mountain ash may also be found. Shrubs include two species of rhododendron, red elder, mountain maple, and wild hydrangea.

VIEWING THE BLACK MOUNTAINS FROM THE TOWER

Mammals include the black bear, deer, red squirrel, woodchuck, wildcat and civet cat. Ruffed grouse and the Carolina junco (snowbird) are found in the park throughout the year, while robins, winter wrens, song sparrows and other songbirds are summer residents.

Mount Mitchell State Park was the first state park to be established in North Carolina. The 1,224 acres included in it were purchased by the State in 1915 to protect and preserve Mount Mitchell and the outstanding scenic and natural values of the park, and to provide outdoor recreation and vacation use.

THE GROUNDS—SOMERSET PLACE

Among the remaining buildings is the manor of Somerset Place. This house, an interesting example of Greek Revival architecture as it was adapted to Eastern North Carolina, was built on the shores of Lake Phelps by Josiah Collins III in the early 1830s. The Pettigrew House, Bonarva, begun in 1789 by Charles Pettigrew and enlarged by Ebenezer Pettigrew, was burned in 1860.

State-owned Lake Phelps, one of the most beautiful of North Carolina's natural lakes, adds greatly to the natural beauty of the park. A magnificent cypress growth along the lake shore is not the least of the attractions that await the visitor. These great old trees, which have seen the rise and decline of the large plantations, form a most attractive setting for the lake, which has long been an angler's paradise. In the 16,600-acre lake, second largest natural lake in the State, black bass and panfish abound.
